Schedule 5

Recreation Centre Design

General comments:

- the buildings and facilities should all be accessible for people with a disability, including those using wheelchairs. This will be of benefit to ex-KRS residents, but also to other members of the community who have a disability, mobility issues or use prams etc.
- The buildings should also have disability accessible bathrooms/change rooms etc.

Pool/recreation facility:

- accessibility would be the key requirement for these facilities, including bathroom/change rooms

Consulting rooms

- based on experience in the design of other community health/allied health facilities, it is ideal to maximise the flexibility of these spaces. The recommended size for each consulting room is 16 sq metres. The rooms should include a basin - then they can be used for practitioners requiring this. The basin should be built in behind cupboards/doors that can be closed to conceal the basin. This way, the room can be converted to a "counselling" type room or used for other functions such as small meetings.
- it is recommended that a reception counter/space be included - this allows any providers to use a reception function to organise their work and appointment flows, greet service users, take enquiries etc.

Kiosk/Cafe

- disability access to this facility is critical, including accessible bathroom
- there is a strong expectation that the cafe serves a range of food that is affordable for people on limited incomes such as pensions.

Community facilities

- the community facility spaces should be flexible enough to cater for small or large groups participating in meetings or activities. At least one large meeting space should be provided, along with a range of medium to smaller rooms. It would be ideal if some of the smaller spaces could be opened up to form a larger space. As well as being used for community meeting facilities, these spaces should be appropriate for running classes and activities that respond to community need. The inclusion of some in built benches/sinks would therefore be useful.
- Consideration has previously been given to using some of the community spaces to display/exhibit items related to the history of the KRS site, art work etc. Therefore some areas that could be used for display/exhibition purposes would be useful. These would obviously then also be available for other community members for similar purposes.

Car Parking

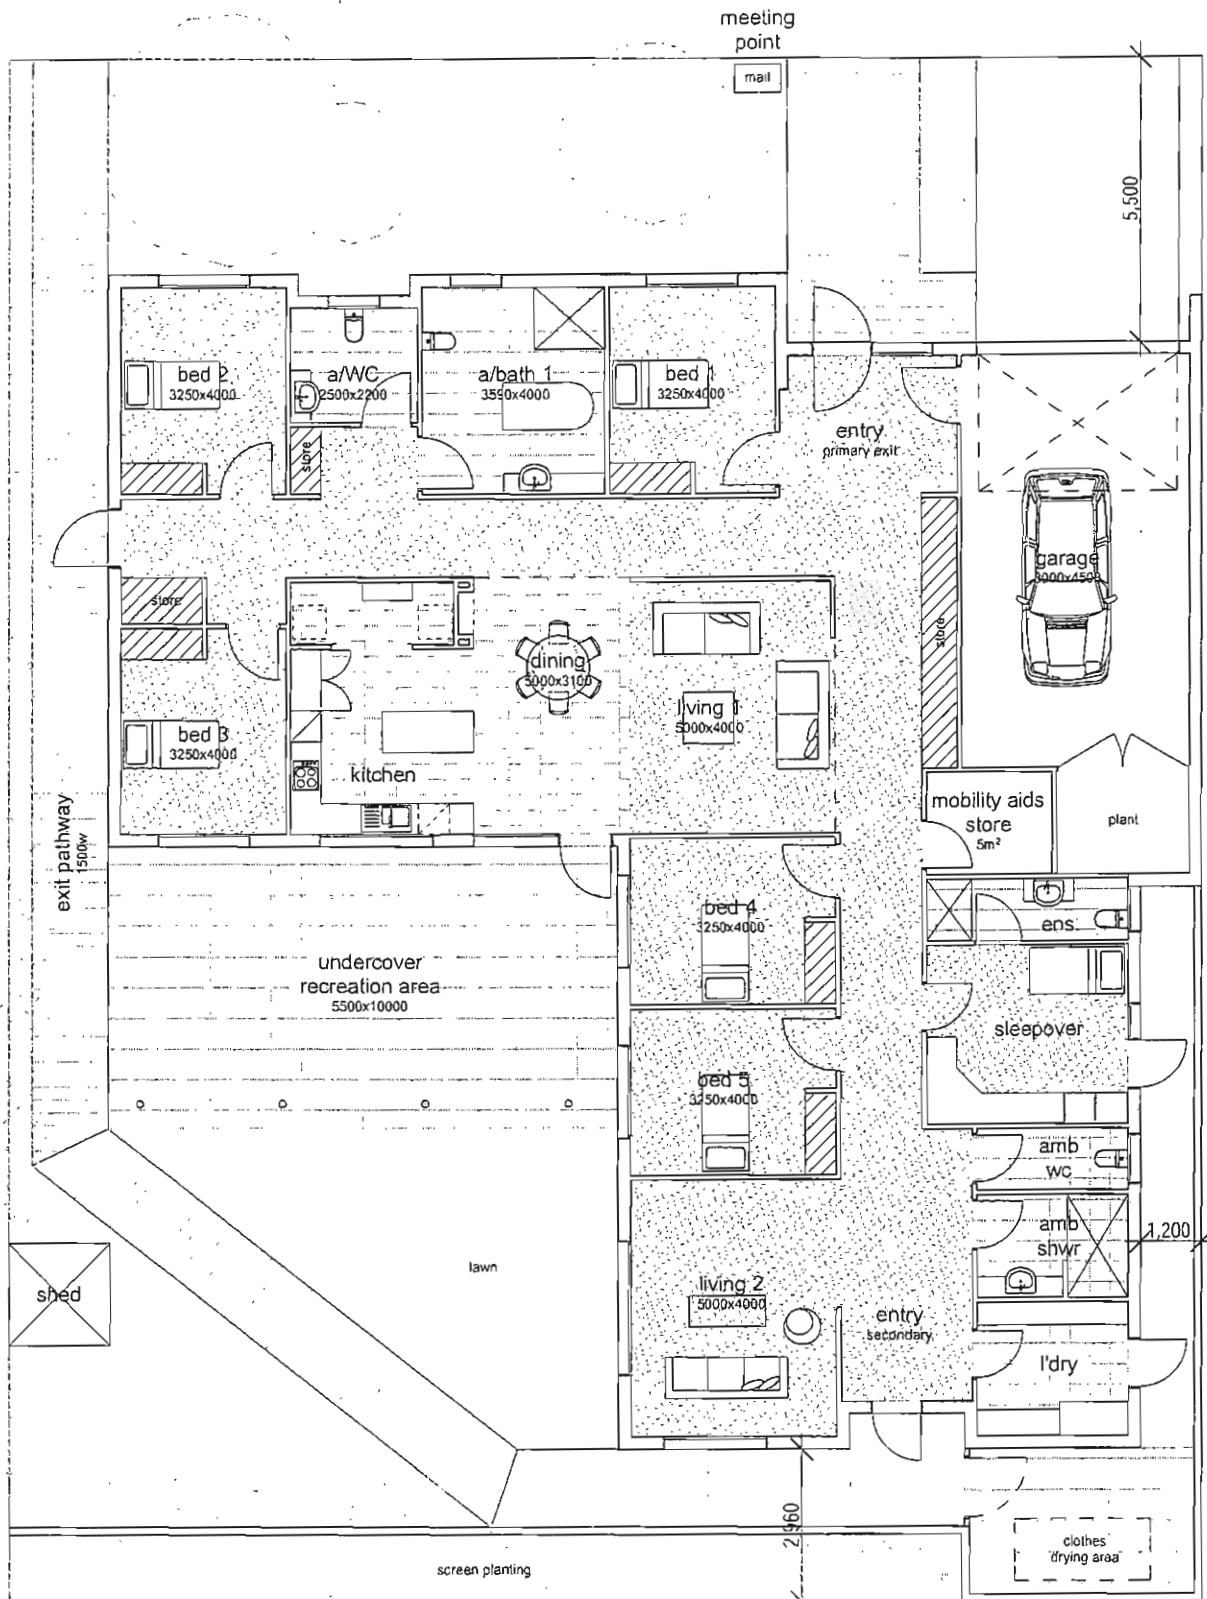

- adequate car parking space will be important, including some disability accessible spaces. These should be of a size to enable small buses to park and assist people using wheelchairs to alight.
